Havana, Fla.

Havana is a town with a population of about 1,500 in the eastern part of Gadsden County, situated on the Seaboard Railroad, just off United States road 90 and on United States road 27.

It is surrounded by a fine agricultural country and many acres of shade tobacco are grown in this vicinity. The land is rich and the corn crop reminds one of corn fields in the corn belt. The farmers also raise peanuts, sweet potatoes and cane.

One sees many a fine herd of Hereford cattle in the pastures and many fine hogs are shipped from here. Recently one of our F. F. A. boys sold an eighteen-month-old steer weighing 350 pounds for $99.50 at Jacksonville.

This is a good business town. Two of our business houses do an average daily business of about one thousand dollars a day in the spring. Our two automobile agencies sell more cars than many much larger towns.

It is probably the best paved town in the state, having about six miles of pavement, much of it concrete. We have a good water and sewer system.

It is of our financial condition that we are especially proud. No ad valorem taxes for operating expenses have been levied for several years as the cost of municipal government is only 5.27 per capita. We have never been in default on either a bond or coupon and we have never refunded the bonds.

The town has three good churches and an accredited high school. The school has an agricultural, home economics and business department.
